It is whispered round that he will be a candidate for the office. He claims that "his business up here is only to prosecute the natives, and not that of a missionary."

Yesterday, Mr. Charles Denby arrived in town. He had been here but a short period till we saw the effects of his words. His words were like oil on the troubled waters. Mr. Denby opened the campaign by a remarks: tame, milk-and-water speech of about fifteen minutes, in which he stigmatized the Republican party as "Yankee Abolitionists." and " Black Republican " fanatics.

He conjured the Democracy not to dig their own grave and the grave of the The madness of 1848 elected Gen. > When history shall render her final verdict on the merits of Mr. Douglas as a statesman, she will no doubt lay on him the responsibility of wantonly re-opening a question which had been closed by a solemn adjustment, to which both the great sections of the country had assented, and in which they continued to acquiesce. Whether he laid sacrilegious hands on that compromise by the promptings of an unchastened ambition, with the purpose of conciliating the favor of the South, or really thought he was serving his country, it cannot now be doubted that, both as regards his political prospects and the public weal, the Kansas-Nebraska bill was the greatest blunder of his life. The South, in whose behalf, and to gain whose support, he dared indignation and odium such as no American statesman had ever before encountered, has since turned against him, and now hedges up the path of his ambition with an impass able barrier. The great mass of the people in his own section of the country, notwithstanding his manly resistance to the Lecompton constitution, affirm the justice of the fate which is pressing upon him.

This STOVE HAS TAKEN THE
first premiums at every Fair where it has been exhibited. At the South-Western Indiana
District Fair, held here October, 1859, there were but two premiums off-red for cooking stores—one for the best wood coeking store, and one for the best coal cooking store. The Economist took the FIRST PREMIUM FOR THE BEST : OOKING STOVE PREMIUM FOR THE BEST - OOKING STOVE FOR WOOD. Roekker, Khrsman & Co took the first premium for their cooking stove for coal. No other premiums were offered. The large silver medal was awarded to the Economist at the New York State Fair held at Chicags, and twelve other State and County Fairs in 1859.

In no branch of mechanical art has there been a more apparent advance than in the manufacture of stoves. It is but a few years since the very name was a novelty, representing a hoge, shapeless structure, almost as devoid of use as ornament. These have gradually given place use as ornament. These have gradually given place to patierus, f grace and utility; until the varieths our marka's now present have almost exhausted the vocabulary of names; and the different phases the vocabulary of names; and the different phases the metal is made to assume, would astonish old Vuicau him-elf. In style and finish, the improvement has been real, leaving nothing to be desired on that point, but the severe competition in price, to which they have been subjected, has deprived them of many of a more substantial qualities desirable. This has more especially to have been the case in refer to cook stoves—an article of domestic economy that has more to do with scolding wives and crotchedy servants than most people inwives and crotchery servants than most people imagine. The public have long sought an improvement in this article, and we believe are ready to pay any reasonable price for a cooking stove, if it only possesses the merits of size, weight, convenience, passesses the merits of size, weight, convenience, durability, economy, and perfection of manufactur. These qualities seem to be possessed most fully in the Econ mist—a new stove, perfected and brought out the past season, by Messis. Treadwell, Ferry & Norton, of Albany. We heard so much of this stove, and it hooked so much like a stove intended for use, that we concluded to try thom, and the result of the experiment convinces us that the processors in their determinant convinces us that result of the experiment convinces us that the protrictors, in their determination to make the best store in the world, have succeeded. We regard the Economies as presenting all the nerits allowe enumerated—as the great stove of the day—far in advance of anything ever strempted in the line of stoves, perfect in all its appointments, and true to its name in durability and the use of fuel. Among the many conveniences attached to it, may be mentioned a large oven, with hooks arranged, for suspending meats while rousting. A copper water tank, holding from 12 to 25 gallons—warming closet, broiting hearth, &c., &c. The broiling hearth is one of the most noticeable features of this remarkable stove. There never has been, to our knowledge, any broiling fixture that was really satisfactory in its eperation. The proprietors of this stove have been conducting a series of experiments upon broiling, cliciting some valuable facts, and resulting in the invention of a gridiron adapted to this stove, which has been secured by letters patent, and is one of the most admirable things of the kind we ever saw—broiling without smoke, and keeping and is one of the most admirable things of the kind we ever saw—brolling without smoke, and keeping the coals in a constant glow. We are always gind to do justice to mechanical improvements, and especially such as contribute so largely to the general good, as the one above mentioned.

The Economist, which is commanding such a large sale, will be found only at SCANTLIN & STE-PHENS'S, Main st., between Water and First, Evansville, Inc.
